

Driveforce™ Manufacturing specialises in sourcing and producing Gaskets, Gasket Kits, seals, and Thermostats plus many more engine related components. Driveforce™ vigorously pursues replacement parts of excellence for the automotive aftermarket and replacement parts industry. Driveforce™ has always prided itself on offering both the highest quality product backed with exceptional service for all our valued customers.

Driveforce™ is well recognised in the automotive industry for providing product catalogues that are a bench mark to the industry. These catalogues enable customers to easily choose and evaluate product information. Driveforce™ has a dedicated resource to the update and maintain these catalogues, ensuring the most accurate information is available at all times for our customers. This information base ensures a high level of product and practical knowledge is available at all times to our customers.

The Driveforce™ gasket range leads the way in both quality and applications. Our ever increasing range covers vehicles from the late 40's through to current applications. This comprehensive catalogue is regularly being updated with new models and engine configurations to ensure it is a resource you can rely on.

Driveforce™ Manufacturing focuses on quality which gives us the confidence to offer our Guarantee of 12 months or 20,000km. All our gaskets are manufactured from the highest quality materials to ensure complete satisfaction to the repairer and end user.

The goods listed in this catalogue are not represented as original equipment or genuine spares but are designed to fit standard engines. Manufacturers names, part numbers, registered trade marks and names and other particulars are used for reference purposes only and do not imply that such parts are made or sold for warranty by the makers of such vehicles.

Whilst every possible care has been taken in the preparation of the information in this catalogue, which has been compiled from the most reliable sources available, we cannot assume responsibility for any errors or incorrect data. It is the responsibility of the end user to ensure the correct gaskets have been supplied, especially as many vehicles have been imported or are not fitted with their original engine.

We reserve the right to withdraw items listed or make changes to materials and/or specifications without prior notice.

GUARANTEE

All Driveforce™ gaskets supplied by Auto Parts (Aust.) Pty Ltd are guaranteed for 12 months or 20,000 km and are made from high quality materials to ensure complete satisfaction to the user. Any item proved to be defective either in workmanship or materials, on examination by a company representative, will be replaced free of charge. Liability is strictly limited to the replacement cost of the gasket. Any item alleged to be faulty must be returned to Auto Parts (Aust.) Pty Ltd freight prepaid and be accompanied by a completed Driveforce™ Warranty Claim Form. All gaskets must be fitted in accordance with the vehicle manufacturers specifications and the installation information included with every Driveforce™ set. We cannot be held responsible for damage by misuse, improper installation or operation, external factors which may cause gasket failure or any other cause beyond the control of Auto Parts (Aust.) Pty Ltd

GENERAL

With today's modern engines, it is extremely important that gaskets and seals are fitted correctly. The following information will help to ensure a quality and lasting result. The two most important factors in successful gasket installation are that both surfaces are clean and flat. Gasket failure will most probably occur if this is not the case. It is extremely rare to have a faulty gasket, especially a cylinder head gasket, so if there is a gasket failure, look for the cause before fitting a new one. Overheating, incorrect ignition timing, or the failure of some other component such as a water pump, thermostat, fan clutch, electric fan, EGR valve or oxygen sensor can all cause head gasket failure. See pages 14 & 15

CYLINDER HEADS

Distortion and Surface Finish. The head and block must be undamaged and flat to within 0.05mm - 0.075mm (0.002" - 0.003") along and across the sealing surfaces. These figures are the combined amount of both head and block. A long straight 6 cylinder head can allow a total of 0.125mm (0.005") along its length. The head and/or block MUST be re-surfaced if distortion exceeds this measurement. This is even more critical with aluminium heads and blocks. The recommended surface finish is as follows:

Conventional non asbestos fibre gaskets: 2 - 2.5 micrometres (80 - 100 microinches) Ra.

Graphite and Carbon Fibre gaskets: 0.75 - 1.5 micrometres (30 - 60 microinches) Ra.

Laminated Multi Layer Steel gaskets:

Without rubberised coating: less than 0.75 micrometres (30 microinches) Ra.

With rubberised coating: less than 0.50 micrometres (20 microinches) Ra.

In the past, it was considered best to have a slightly rough surface to bite into the gasket but this is incorrect theory for modern engines where gasket materials are completely different. The smoother the finish, the better is the current expert opinion world wide.

Check the thickness of the head after machining to ensure the head bolts are not too long which would cause the threads to bottom out before the head is tight. If this is the case, use a shim with the head gasket or add an extra washer under the head of the bolt. Do not machine heads more than manufacturers specifications as excessive machining may cause gasket and/or engine failure. Where surfaces with threaded holes have been machined, the holes must be chamfered to prevent the thread being drawn up above the surface when the bolts are tightened.

Hardness. Alloy heads must be checked for hardness with a hardness tester as constant heating and cooling causes the material to soften, particularly if the engine has overheated or welding repairs have been made. As a general rule, heads with a Brinell hardness of less than 70 should be discarded but this rule is to be used in accordance with manufacturers' specifications. Most cylinder heads will have begun softening after having been exposed to temperatures of 200° - 250° Celsius (392° - 482° Fahrenheit). At 300° Celsius, the head will have softened to such an extent to make it unserviceable and therefore should be replaced. The result of using a soft head is a leaking head gasket as it is impossible to keep the head bolts at the correct tension as they gradually sink into the top of the head with the expansion and contraction of the engine as it heats and cools. If indentations appear under the heads of the bolts, this is a sure sign that the head has softened.

COOLING SYSTEM

Overheating. Modern engines run at much higher temperatures, 85° - 105° Celsius, than their counterparts of 30 years ago where the temperatures were around 75°. These higher temperatures result in a much smaller margin for error in items such as incorrect ignition timing, low or loss of coolant, faulty water pump, slipping fan clutch or belt, faulty electric fan or switch, faulty thermostat, deposits in water jacket of block, clogged radiator, incorrect air / fuel mixture, restrictions in the exhaust system. All of these can cause overheating which can result in gasket, or in extreme cases, engine failure.

Hot Spots. Hot spots are caused by localised overheating, either in a cylinder head or block. This causes extreme stress to the surrounding metal, resulting in a soft spot in the head or even a crack. In turn, this causes abnormal expansion which results in the head gasket being crushed in this area, an exhaust gas leak then starts, eroding the gasket material and the fire rings and finally, complete head gasket failure.

Coolant. A large proportion of head gaskets received by our company for examination which have failed in service can be directly attributed to overheating. This can be caused by many different reasons, as explained above but generally, the cooling system is mostly ignored. This however, is one of the most important items in today's modern engine as most cooling systems operate at close to maximum capacity.

When an engine is partly or completely disassembled, the cooling system should be flushed and new coolant used. It is also important to have the radiator flushed and cleaned by a specialist as deposits are prone to build up, resulting in reduced flow. There are many reasons for the cause of corrosion deposits such as electrolysis, chemical, cavitation and stray electric current, all of which cause a build up in the system and reduce the transfer of heat from the engine. Ethylene Glycol mixed with water has always been used in the past in coolant as it increases the boiling point and decreases the freezing point but has some disadvantages such as causing corrosion, leakage problems and is highly toxic. As the chemicals deteriorate, the coolant becomes less effective. Some new vehicles now use long life coolants called OAT - Organic Acid Technology. These are coloured a light brown or orange and should not be mixed with, or replaced with other coolants. Some vehicle manufacturers insist on a particular brand and grade of coolant for certain models but in the absence of this information, always use a quality coolant in the cooling system, not water.

MANIFOLDS

Some manifolds, including inlet manifolds, are prone to distortion and may have to be resurfaced before fitting new gaskets. Always retighten after 500 km.

VALVE COVERS, OIL PANS & MISCELLANEOUS COMPONENTS

Paper and cork gaskets may be coated with a sealant before installation to create a better seal. All components of pressed metal, such as some valve covers and oil pans, must be checked for distortion, especially around the bolt holes, and be flattened where necessary as unequal pressure on the gasket will result in oil leakage and gasket damage. This particularly applies to cork gaskets which should not be over tightened.

CYLINDER HEAD BOLTS

Bolt Performance. Under the application of load, all bolts exhibit four main phases; the elastic phase, the plastic phase, the yield point and the shear point. In the elastic phase a bolt will stretch under tension but return to its original length when the load is removed. As we continue to apply load the bolt reaches the plastic phase from which it can no longer recover to its original length and is now permanently stretched. The point that separates the elastic phase from the plastic phase is called the yield point of the bolt. Finally, if we continue to apply load the shear point is reached and the bolt material wastes and breaks.

Installing Cylinder Head Bolts. When installing cylinder head bolts (and any bolt that has to be tightened to a specified torque), the thread of the bolt and under the head of the bolt should be oiled before assembly. This will give 2 - 3 times the loading over a dry assembly. Where head bolts penetrate into the water jacket, coat the threads with a non hardening sealant.

Torque to Yield Cylinder Head Bolts. Torque to yield (TTY) bolts, also commonly referred to as angle torque or stretch bolts, are used in many of today's modern engines predominantly for cylinder head bolts but also main bearing and big end caps. Compared to conventional type bolts, TTY bolts offer the engine manufacturer a number of advantages including greater flexibility of design, reductions in component costs, more accurate assembly and reliability of seal. Engines designed utilising TTY head bolts require fewer head bolts to achieve the desired clamping loads than those using conventional bolts. With fewer bolts the engine manufacturer has more flexibility in cylinder head and block design as well as reducing the cost of the engine. Whilst TTY bolts are attractive to the engine manufacturer, there are disadvantages to the engine repairer. For the most of us it would be unthinkable to replace a conventional head bolt unless the bolt was damaged, i.e. stripped threads, the bolt head was rounded off, the shank was severely corroded or pitted. Conventional head bolts simply just did not wear out. Torque to yield head bolts however, by the very nature of their design, do wear out, are made to be used once only and should NEVER be reused.

Installing TTY Bolts. TTY head bolts are also tightened in a series of stages and in sequence, however they are not tightened to a predetermined torque, they are tightened through a series of specified angles. This data is provided by the engine manufacturer and should always be adhered to. While the first step in the tightening process is normally stated as a torque figure it is done so only to provide a uniform baseline from which the true load is then applied. This is commonly referred to as a pre-load or snug torque. A typical tightening specification would look as follows:

Uniformly tighten in correct sequence in several passes to 78Nm

Tighten in correct sequence 90°

Tighten in correct sequence a further 90°

This procedure ensures that friction does not cause an uneven bolt loading and that the correct high tension is achieved every time during assembly. It is essential that a quality wrench with an accurate angle gauge be used to achieve the correct angles of turn of the tightening process.

Unlike a conventional bolt, TTY bolts are tightened beyond their elastic range past their yield point from which the bolt material can recover to its original length, and into the plastic phase of the bolt material. The bolt is permanently stretched and for this reason should not be reused. The reliability of these bolts once stretched is greatly reduced. If they are re-used, they are permanently stretched further a second or third time. It is also for this reason why you should never re-torque a torque to yield bolt. Some engine manufactures provide a measurement within which a head bolt may be reused, however the age and history of the bolt is not taken into account. The bolt may well be within specification to pass a simple measurement test but could be very close to its shear point. Only one failed bolt can result in serious combustion leakage. The cost of a new set of TTY bolts is well justified when compared to the cost of having to repair an engine for the second time because of insufficient clamping load due to bolt fatigue.

ENGINE ASSEMBLY

All bolts and studs must be undamaged and assembled with a light film of oil under the bolt heads and washers and on the threads of the bolts. If the bolts penetrate the water jacket, use a non hardening sealant. Oil under the bolt heads and threads can increase the clamping load on the cylinder head by 2 - 3 times. If torque-to-yield bolts are specified, they MUST be replaced. Bolt sets are listed in this catalogue with the models that require replacement. If TTY bolts are not replaced, any gasket warranty is voided.

No sealants should be used when assembling Superseal coated and beaded head gaskets. Superseal non re-torque head gaskets are made from pre-tensioned material with a special coating and a silicone bead to assist in the sealing process. Standard non-coated head gaskets may be coated before assembly with a suitable sealant if required. A silicone bead alone does not signify a non re-torque head gasket. Most engine reconditioners recommend that ALL head gaskets, even the non re-torque type, be re-tensioned after 500 - 800 km to ensure a good and lasting seal. This, however, does NOT apply to heads with torque-to-yield bolts. This is especially important on later model high compression engines where the correct tensions are critical. Retighten cast iron heads at operating temperature and aluminium heads when the engine is cold. Cylinder heads must be tightened in the correct sequence in stages in accordance with the manufacturer's specifications with a good quality tension wrench. In the absence of this information, tighten in 3 stages, working outwards from the centre in a radial pattern.

OIL SEALS

Oil seals and valve stem seals should be assembled with a light film of oil on both the shaft and the lip of the seal to prevent the lip being burnt on start up. Oil seals should be fitted with a proper tool otherwise distortion and/or damage to the sealing lip can take place resulting in a leak. A sleeve must be placed over a shaft before installation if the shaft contains any sharp edges such as spines or keyways to prevent damage to the sealing lip. If a seal is to be fitted to a housing before being bolted to the engine, make sure the seal is centred on the shaft before tightening the housing bolts. Never fit a seal to a shaft that has been marked by the old seal otherwise a leak will re-occur. Have the shaft machined before installation but do not attempt to polish the shaft with an abrasive material such as emery cloth as this leaves microscopic scratches on the shaft which will damage the sealing lip. Oil seal manufacturers recommend that the surface finish of the shaft should be 0.25 - 0.50 micrometres (10 - 20 microinches) Ra. Remember that all oil seals of the same size are not necessarily suitable for the same application. Some seals, for example, have hydrodynamic sealing lips which in most cases, are mono directional. These are distinguished by helical lines or ribs on the seal surface which help to pump oil back and must only be used where the shaft rotates in the direction for which the seal was made, that is, left or right when facing the end of the shaft. Oil seals are also made from different materials such as Nitrile, Polyacrylate, Silicone and Fluoro-elastomer (Viton) which have different temperature ratings and characteristics to satisfy different sealing requirements. As an example, a silicone seal makes a very good crankshaft seal but would not be suitable for a wheel seal. Fluoro-elastomer seals and O rings are made from a synthetic material containing fluorine and must be treated with extreme caution if they have been exposed to abnormally high temperatures as the material changes its form into a black, sticky mass and produces hydrofluoric acid, an extremely corrosive substance. This acid, if it comes into contact with human tissue, is almost impossible to remove. It must be allowed to cool to normal surrounding temperatures and the area should be thoroughly decontaminated before any work is done. Under no circumstances should it ever be touched.

FAILURE TO ADHERE TO THESE INSTRUCTIONS WILL VOID ANY WARRANTY

Cylinder head gasket failure, particularly in later model engines, is becoming more common, mainly because the installer has not (a) completed the installation to the manufacturers requirements; or (b) has not checked the many ancillary items which can contribute to gasket failure, some in a very short time.

It should be remembered that the cylinder head gasket is the "weakest link in the chain" so that any problem that arises due to incorrect adjustments etc of other components will affect the head gasket first. Some common and not so common causes of gasket failure are listed here.

CYLINDER HEAD

1. The head must be flat within 0.05mm (0.002") and should be machined before re-fitting.
2. If alloy, it should also be tested for hardness. Any head with a Brinnell hardness reading of less than 75 should be discarded as it will be impossible to retain the correct tension because as it heats up and expands, the heads of the bolts sink into the head. As a result, when the engine cools down and contracts, the bolts have lost their tension.
3. Check for corrosion around coolant holes and repair as required as corrosion leads to loss of the gasket sealing surface.

CYLINDER HEAD BOLTS

1. Bolts must be oiled on the threads and under the heads before assembling. This gives 2 - 3 times the loading on the gasket over against a dry assembly.
2. Bolts that go into a water jacket, coat with a non hardening sealant.
3. Torque to yield bolts and bolts with angular tightening can be used once only and MUST be replaced.
4. Check the head bolt holes in the bolt to ensure the threads are not pulled above the block. Recess if necessary and tap out the threads.
5. Tighten all bolts in the correct order and tension according to the manufacturers specifications using a good quality tension wrench.

COOLING SYSTEM

1. Check radiator hoses, fan belt, radiator cap and water pump to ensure there is no deterioration and that fan belt tension is correct.
2. Flush radiator to ensure there is no blockages.
3. Use correct coolant specified for the vehicle. Incorrect or sub standard coolant can damage cylinder heads and gaskets.
4. Test thermostat - it is preferable to replace it.

EGR VALVE

1. It is most important that this is checked for correct operation. A malfunctioning EGR valve can cause localised hotspots in cylinder heads caused by excessive combustion temperatures. This will not show on the temperature gauge as it is localised. This results in excessive expansion of the head at this spot which crushes the gasket, spreading it out, sometimes even over the edge of the cylinder. The gases then burn the gasket and eventually leads to a piece being blown completely out.

OXYGEN SENSOR

1. Late model vehicles are fitted with an oxygen sensor which measures the state of the exhaust gases and gives the information to the computer which regulates the air to fuel ratio. If this sensor is faulty, the mixture will be incorrect, and gasket failure will occur caused by similar circumstances to that of the EGR valve. If a head gasket has allowed coolant to leak into the exhaust system, the oxygen sensor will almost certainly be damaged.
2. Make sure oxygen sensor is tested before the engine is started.

IGNITION TIMING

1. Unless the ignition timing is set accurately, pre-ignition and/or detonation will occur. This is normally referred to as abnormal combustion and if not corrected, can not only cause head gasket failure but can damage pistons and piston rings also.
2. In later model engines which run much hotter and with higher compression ratios, it is imperative that this does not occur as gasket and / or piston failure will result in a very short period.

SEE ILLUSTRATIONS OVER PAGE

Loose Assembly

There will be no or few compression marks on the gasket faces. The thickness will be almost the same as a new un-compressed gasket. Leakage occurs in the first few hours.

Cause:

Cylinder head bolts insufficiently tightened.

- Damaged or dirty threads
- Excess oil or water in bolt holes.
- Bolt bottoming out in the block.

(Correct torque may be achieved before bolt is actually clamping).

Old bolts re-used (torque to yield bolts should always be replaced).

Abnormal Combustion

Gasket material is burnt away, often between the cylinders, or at a location where detonation or pre-ignition occurs. Discolorations are indicative of elevated temperatures around the bore ferrules and combustion gas leakage paths are evident.

Cause:

Detonation and pre-ignition increase the localized surface temperatures in the combustion chamber and damages the gasket by burning away the gasket material. In addition, the excessive cylinder pressures counteract the clamping load.

Entrapment

Gaskets and components must be thoroughly cleaned before assembly.

Cause:

Any foreign material trapped between the mating surfaces will seriously impair the gasket's sealing performance.

Overheating

Facing Materials are hard and carbonized, surface cracks are evident, and bore ferrules are discoloured.

Cause:

Overheating causes gasket damage by hardening the facing materials. The lost elasticity prevents the gasket from following the cylinder head and block as they expand and contract, and leakage occurs.

TORQUE CONVERSION FACTORS

ANOTHER
HANDY HINT FROM DRIVEFORCE

FOLLOW THE ARROWS TO CONVERT:

$$\begin{aligned}83\text{Nm} \times 0.74 &= 61.42 \text{ ft lbs} \\12 \text{ Kg m} \times 7.233 &= 86.8 \text{ ft lbs} \\200 \text{ lb f in} \times 0.113 &= 22.6 \text{ Nm}\end{aligned}$$

The DRIVEFORCE gasket hook has been designed as a simple method for storing gaskets alpha-numerically in the least possible space and yet still able to find any part number quickly and easily. Many customers are already using this system not only for gaskets, but also for radiator hoses and fan belts. In fact, it can be used for almost any product that is able to be hung. The identification plate takes a normal label from a labelling machine up to 12mm wide or laser printed labels and the hook can be hung on any bar up to 28mm diameter. The best method for gaskets is to use 25mm square bars hung at heights of 1 metre and 2 metres. Laser printed labels can be supplied for all gasket part numbers, printed and ready to apply at no charge to our customers.

 Both suitable for non sleeved blocks (to 1991)
 New cylinder head bolts MUST be used. The head, if distorted, should be replaced, not machined.

5. G01345 used in some early engines.

9. KK243 alternative steel ring

23. GG1103 for pump with gasket
 GG1252 for pump with O ring
